

RENÉ DEPUIS

Born on the last day in 1971, René was only 8 years old when his fathers work in DNV took the family abroad for 3 years, living in both South-Korea and Japan.

René has been working ever since he was old enough to do the paper round. After finishing highschool focusing on natural & science, he served in the military as a chef. A quick stop into the radio business before several years in the fastfood business as both operations manager and franchisee.

After moving into an 1890 building in Oslo, he found that no one combined the knowledge with the high quality securityproducts that he needed to feel safe at home.

He therefore formed Trygg og Sikker AS in 2002, which become the leading online securityshop for consumers in Norway. A part of Trygg og Sikker AS was also running the If Securityshop.

In 2009, René started working at BSP AS, a distributor of security products for consumers, which emerged from Trygg og Sikker AS. René is now working part time setting up Luniq AB in Sweden, and is also an active member in two committees in Standards of Norway. He has participated in several working groups with The Norwegian Directorate for Civil Protection (DSB) among others.

It has been said that two out of ten ideas that René comes up with is great, but only one of them is commercially viable. And he believe the Batterybox is one of those.
